La Rumorosa: Rock Art Along the Border
by Don Liponi, Photographer, Editor and Author

Join photographer, editor and author Don Liponi for a discussion of the book La Rumorosa: Rock Art Along the Border, a survey of Kumeyaay and related artwork in Southern California, Colorado River Corridor, Western Arizona and Baja California.

The Kumeyaay are thought to be descendants of the Patayan tradition. This is the first publication to focus on the indigenous rock art of this region and is a testament to the historical permanence of Kumeyaay culture. A team of over 15 major contributors, one-third of whom are Native Americans, and prominent regional professional archaeologists and avid avocationalists worked together over a 5-year period to discover or rediscover more than 100 new rock art sites that have never been published.

Don will be selling signed copies of his book after the talk. The book contains over 150 color photos and interviews with Tipai Native Americans and contributions by regional Native Americans and leading archaeologists like Ken Hedges, Steve Shackley, Polly Schaafsma, Lynn H. Gamble, Michael Wilken-Robertson and Ben Swadley. The book is on sale for $20; all money from sales goes towards the design and production of the second volume for which they are busy compiling yet more sites.

Don is a retired oncology Hospital Pharmacist and a chemist, and developed mathematical modeling of pharmacokinetic drugs for several San Diego hospitals. His father introduced him to the desert and the Kumeyaay culture as a teenager. He is a volunteer researcher for the El Centro Bureau of Land Management Rock Art Research project and a member of the Society of California Archaeology, the California Rock Art Foundation, the Anza-Borrego Desert Natural History Association, the Anza Borrego Stewardship program, the Utah Rock Art Research Association, the Coachella Valley Archaeological Society, and the San Diego Rock Art Association.
